01 Executive Intelligence Verdict

Competitive Disadvantage Identified

Competitors currently control important customer questions, narratives, visibility channels, or buying decisions that should be addressed within the campaign strategy. The strategic position of 'Competitive Disadvantage Identified' is supported by the data showing severe competitive exposure and critical decision leakage. The brand has 0% share of voice and is invisible across all AI engines, while competitors dominate the market with significant control over buyer questions. The campaign intelligence score of 34/100 and GEON score of 30/100 further indicate a weak market position.

02 Executive Summary

Puzzlax.com is at a competitive disadvantage in the market, with severe exposure and critical decision leakage.

The brand is invisible across AI engines and has a 0% share of voice, with competitors holding significant control over buyer questions.

TOP STRATEGIC FINDINGS

- Puzzlax.com has 0% visibility across all AI engines measured.
- Competitors such as asana.com, clickup.com, and notion.so control 22 of 26 buyer questions outright.
- The brand's competitive exposure is severe at 92/100, and decision leakage is critical at 100/100.

TOP COMPETITIVE RISKS

- The brand is invisible in AI-driven search results, leading to zero share of voice.
- Competitors dominate the market, holding significant control over buyer questions.
- High decision leakage indicates potential loss of strategic insights to competitors.

TOP MISSED OPPORTUNITIES

- Lack of visibility in AI engines represents a missed opportunity for brand exposure.
- The absence of data in key journey stages like Discovery, Research, and Comparison limits strategic insights.

CAMPAIGN IMPLICATIONS

The campaign must focus on improving AI visibility and addressing competitive control to gain market traction.

Primary recommendation

Enhance AI visibility and address competitive control to improve market position and reduce competitive disadvantage.

GEON Assessment

04 AI vs Google Intelligence

GOOGLE STRONG · AI WEAK

0 (0%)

Customers who search find the business; customers who ask an AI assistant are shown someone else. Discovery holds, recommendation leaks.

AI STRONG · GOOGLE WEAK

0 (0%)

AI assistants surface the business but search does not confirm it. Validation stalls because the claim cannot be checked.

INVISIBLE IN BOTH

26 (100%)

The business is absent from both channels — there is no discovery to convert.

ALIGNED AND VISIBLE

0 (0%)

Discovery and validation reinforce each other. These are the positions worth defending.

HOW EACH GAP AFFECTS THE BUYING JOURNEY

GAP	DISCOVERY	VALIDATION	TRUST	COMPARISON	RECOMMENDATION	CAMPAIGN PERFORMANCE
Invisible in both	The business is not discovered on these questions through either channel.	There is nothing to validate — no claim reaches the buyer in the first place.	No trust is being built or lost here; the business is simply not part of the conversation.	Competitors define the comparison set without the business in it.	No recommendation surface exists on these questions.	All demand here must be bought. Campaign spend carries the entire load with no organic support.

05 AI Visibility Analysis

Recommendation presence is ranking-based: it counts answers where the brand placed in the top 3 of a ranked or listed response. AI engines do not expose an explicit recommendation flag.

06 Competitor Intelligence

Competitors control the market primarily due to their strong content coverage and authority, which allows them to own buyer questions outright. This control is reinforced by their accumulated third-party signals, making them difficult to displace without strategic content efforts.

WHY COMPETITORS APPEAR INSTEAD

Competitors like asana.com, clickup.com, and notion.so dominate because they have comprehensive content coverage and authority in the market. They own 10 buyer questions outright each, indicating strong content alignment with user queries. Their authority and visibility are built over time through accumulated third-party signals such as citations and reviews, which are not easily disrupted by a single campaign.
